

5 ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A data management framework for a data communications network. The framework includes a dynamically constructed model of elements of the data communications network. The elements are represented as object instances that are self-descriptive. 10 The model provides a uniform application programming interface that allows a client to dynamically access the elements and dynamically add new elements in performing network management functions. The data management framework may be used for policy management.

15

20

25

30

35